The Lost Boot

Lew got new blue boots, and he put them by the door. The next morning, one boot was missing! “Where is my new boot?” said Lew. He looked in his room. He looked under his bed and on his book shelf. Dad helped him look in the kitchen and by the steps. They looked under the coats on the hooks, but the boot was not there. Then Lew peeked into the yard, and there was his pup by the bushes. The pup had the boot, and he was chewing on it! “No, pup! That is my new boot!” said Lew. Lew held up a treat, and the pup let go of the boot. Then Lew took the boot back. It had a few tooth marks, but it was still good. Dad got the pup a big bone to chew. From then on, Lew kept his boots on a hook, and the pup chewed his bone.

The Blue Kite

Lew wished he had a kite. “We can make one,” said Dad. They got a few sticks, a ball of string and a big blue sheet. Dad used glue to stick the sheet to the sticks. Lew drew a moon and stars on it. Then they took the kite to the park. The wind blew and blew. Lew ran, and the kite flew up, up, up! “Look at it go!” said Lew. Then a big gust blew the kite into a tree, and the string slid from his hand. Dad stood on his tiptoes, but he could not reach it. Then Lew had a plan. Lew picked up a long stick with a hook on the tip. Dad lifted Lew up, and Lew hooked the string. He gave it a pull, and the kite fell into Lew's arms. “That was cool!” said Lew. Soon the kite flew again.

The Fawn

Lew wanted to see a fawn. Dad said that fawns can be seen in the meadow at dawn. So Lew got up at dawn, and he gave a big yawn. He put on his sweater and his hat, and he got his sketch pad. Lew and Dad crept to the meadow and sat on a log by the pond to watch. “We must be still,” said Dad. Lew waited. He wanted to crawl in the grass, but he stayed still. Then Lew saw a doe step from the trees. A fawn with white spots was with her. It had long legs and a wet nose. Lew held his breath. He drew the fawn in his sketch pad.
